

CHINA 1945

大陸資訊及研究中心

0055564

RICHARD BERNSTEIN

MAO'S REVOLUTION AND

AMERICA'S FATEFUL CHOICE

"The current rivalry between the United States and China for the dominant role in East Asia is rooted in a complicated history dating back to 1945. Richard Bernstein's compelling and moving examination of U.S.-China relations during and immediately after World War II sparkles with fresh insights into the tragic events and colorful personalities of that era. A model of historical writing for non-specialist readers, its only fault is that once begun it is almost impossible to put down."

—Steven I. Levine, coauthor of Mao: The Real Story

"In this thoroughly researched and lucidly written book, Richard Bernstein describes a watershed moment of historical change, when the kaleidoscopic pattern of Chinese politics and that volatile country's relationship with the United States and the world irrevocably changed. China 1945 is an enormously engaging narrative filled with a cast of colorful actors who set the terms of the game for the next half century."

—Orville Schell, director, Center on U.S.-China Relations, Asia Society

"The dramatic events of 1945 continue to shape American relations with China. Mao, Zhou Enlai, Joseph Stilwell, George Marshall—these and other giant personalities come to life in here, as we relive the fateful choices events forced on them in a year of nonstop crises."

—Andrew J. Nathan, coauthor of The Tiananmen Papers

"Richard Bernstein's China 1945 goes far beyond delivering up that pivotal year, providing instead a learned and compelling narrative of the characters and forces that drove China and the United States apart and created today's world."

—Howard French, author of China's Second Continent

"At the beginning of 1945, America had the chance to forge a good relationship with Mao and his Chinese Communist rebels. Richard Bernstein's fascinating and important tale of what happened provides crucial lessons about creative diplomacy."

—Walter Isaacson, author of Steve Jobs

"Extensively researched, elegantly written, and provocatively argued, China 1945 reexamines a fateful period when Roosevelt's wrong decisions combined with Stalin's geostrategic ambitions and Mao's ideological inclinations to seal the fate of the Cold War in Asia for a quarter century—with enduring consequences for Sino-American antagonisms to this day. An illuminating and sobering study well worth reading by all American policymakers and China watchers."

—David Shambaugh, George Washington University and The Brookings Institution

"At a time when the United States and China are groping for a 'new model' of great power relations, Richard Bernstein's stimulating and informative book casts essential light on the era that led to today's challenge. China 1945 makes us more aware than ever of the hideous complexities of American involvement in East Asia, the importance of history, and the limited perspectives of those who make fateful choices."

—Jerome A. Cohen, codirector, U.S.-Asia Law Institute, New York University, and adjunct senior fellow for Asia, Council on Foreign Relations

ISBN 978-0-307-59588-1 HISTORY

9 780307 595881

Contents

A Note on Chinese Names and Places	xi
Map	2
Introduction	5

PART I: INNOCENTS IN CHINA

CHAPTER ONE:	A Rare Victory	11
CHAPTER TWO:	The Generalissimo and the Americans	23
CHAPTER THREE:	The Devastated Country	51
CHAPTER FOUR:	Mao, Zhou, and the Americans	87
CHAPTER FIVE:	The Dark Side	125

PART II: SEEDS OF ANIMOSITY

CHAPTER SIX:	The Wrong Man	141
CHAPTER SEVEN:	The Rage of an Envoy	175
CHAPTER EIGHT:	A Moral Compromise	185
CHAPTER NINE:	Hiding the Knife	198
CHAPTER TEN:	The War over China Policy	220
CHAPTER ELEVEN:	Mao the God, Service the Spy	242

PART III: VICTORY AND FAILURE

CHAPTER TWELVE:	Hearts and Minds	265
CHAPTER THIRTEEN:	Everything Stalin Wanted	279
CHAPTER FOURTEEN:	Facts on the Ground	293
CHAPTER FIFTEEN:	What to Do?	328

CHAPTER SIXTEEN:	Marshall Comes Close	346
CHAPTER SEVENTEEN:	From Hope to Antagonism	365
EPILOGUE:	The Tragedy of the Chinese Revolution	385
Acknowledgments		399
Notes		401
Bibliography		427
Index		433